

3

Event Driven

Event Driven Programming

Event Driven programming is a style of programming where events such as key presses, mouse events, or timing events trigger event handlers to execute different blocks of code. This happens in a loop waiting for events to be processed.

Paul Smith